4. Unfinished Business

A. Artistic Bus Shelter

The Committee discussed the project idea of adding artistically enhanced bus shelters in Creve Coeur as a way to add public art to the city while also provided needed shelter for public transit users. Scott Saunders said artists are good at artistically enhancing spaces within given guidelines. Robert Morrissey proposed the shelters be used an art gallery with rotating artwork, and the committee could collaborate with local schools.

Staff liaison Melissa Bradford stated that the committee could submit a project idea for the city's Capital Improvement Plan (CIP). The CIP is updated annually, and the city accepts new ideas for the CIP each year, which are typically due by January 31st. The project idea would need to provide purpose, justification and cost estimates. The best approach is to buy a template shelter and add artistic enhancements to that. The Committee would also need to consider if there would be an artistic theme / what character are we trying to achieve for Creve Coeur. Melissa agreed to investigate the cost of a template shelter.
